“ It was one of my first days ever of high school: I remember being so overwhelmed, about to have a panic attack amidst the sea of strangers shuffling by me. While frantically looking around trying to remember which way I was supposed to go, I felt a tap on my shoulder. “Sup, cuz?” I turned and saw that it was you; I’d never been more happy to see a familiar face in my entire life.

I couldn’t tell you what I ate for lunch yesterday, or what song played on the radio the first time I drove in a car by myself. But I vividly remember the sound of your voice greeting me in that frantic corridor. I remember the smile on your face turning into a full blown laugh as you watched my terrified expression instantly transform into one of relief upon seeing you. That small gesture of kindness meant more to me than I ever could’ve expressed. Thank you for saving me that day. Also thank you for that time you shared your Little Debbie with me after I’d dropped mine on the floor at your parents house. As little kids, that was a pretty big deal.

Someday when we meet again, I’ll be new to the place and probably pretty scared. But I know you’ll find me in the middle of the crowd and show me which direction I’m supposed to go. Until then, I hope you’re able to come hang out with me in a dream every so often. I promise I’ll share the good snacks with you. 💜

“ My condolences to the family and friends. Jeff and I only had nearly a year and a half of life spent together. I will forever cherish it. We both enjoyed lounging around watching our criminal law shows, some sitcoms, and eating junk we both didn't need 😭 He loved his fruity mentos, trolli gummies, reese's, frosted flakes, and honey oh's. He also loved his sausage links, and wiggly bacon. He was also a good cook when he wanted to! I enjoyed his company. He never made me feel alone or unloved. His day wouldn't be complete until he messed with me a few times throughout it. I wish I had more pics to share but these were taken by Jeff himself. His cat, Roman, always liked to get in his face and lick it while he was sleeping. Jeff would get so annoyed, but of course I found it funny. Jeff will be missed dearly.

Jeff, I wish we could have had more time together to do so much more we didn't get the chance to do. Until we meet again in a better place! Then we can continue where we left off. We both tried together to conquer your demons, as you were helping me conquer mine at the same time. I felt we were a good team babe, but God had better plans for you. I'm happy you are at peace now. I love you, Jeff! 🥰

“ I will forever miss you my brother. You were always so talented with building and fixing things. And dad found your Legos. My boys (your nephews) love Legos too. I'll never forget our hickey games in the basement, tubing up north, and family get together. You were a smart guy. It's too bad you were taken so soon. Rest In Peace brother. I'm saddened that my kids will never know the Uncle Jeff as I knew from our younger years. You would have taught them all about soccer, building things, and maybe a few karate moves. Love you.

“ Many Shared memories, one is Jeff's karate days. Loved watching them practice and test. All the weekends and family trips we took together. Very heart breaking that Jeff has passed but knowing he is in a place of beauty and peace hopefully gives his family some comfort. You are all in our thoughts and prayers!
