“ When I think of my grandpa, the first thing that comes to mind is walking. My grandpa loved to walk! He walked for miles and miles every day since I can remember. If you dropped by his house at almost any time during the day, he was probably in the basement walking!

When I was a little girl and my grandparents babysat me, my grandpa was always working on a project or fixing something. The first time I ever saw spray paint used was when my grandpa painted his backyard fence a shimmering silver. I thought it was so cool! He was also pretty creative. I remember him using anything he could find to make contraptions to fix things. It taught me that there is almost always a way to fix something if you think about it just right.

My grandpa had a special talent, too. He made the absolute best pudding cake in the whole world! Chocolate, vanilla, graham crackers... YUM! Every single holiday, he never disappointed. The pudding cake was always made, and it was always my favorite dessert!

Though my grandpa was a man of few words, we did share laughter over one special Italian actor, Roberto Benigni. After lunch, during some of our family gatherings, we would often put a Roberto movie in the VCR and laugh at all of Roberto's silly antics. He had probably seen some of the movies a million times, but they still made him chuckle.

Grandpa, I'm glad for the times we shared as I grew up. Rest peacefully.
