“ I had the distinct pleasure of meeting Sal and Mafalda for the first time back in 2002 as a business relationship. I remember meeting them at their house for our initial meeting where Mafalda “whipped up” a fantastic melody of vegetables, breads and other Italian goodies for our meeting. Sal introduced me to my first espresso. Being an Irish boy, I was not used to the strength of the coffee and he could tell. He humorously reached up in the cabinet and brought out a bottle of amaretto to take the bite off a bit for my pleasure. After that meeting I’ve been honored to work with them for many many years, both from a business perspective as well as socially. Many wine tasting events, anniversary dinners, including their 50th wedding anniversary where we got the whole family together. Over these many years I can honestly say that our relationship turned as much to friendship as it was professional. Sal is a man that I held in the utmost respect. I so loved our one on one meetings where he would talk about the old country and teach me the history of Italy and how he came over as a young man, worked multiple jobs and of course went on to raise a beautiful family and develop a successful business. As I’m crushed to hear of his passing, I rely on our faith in God that he is sitting with Jesus and will as he always did here on earth, prepare a warm and inviting Reunion for family and friends in the future. Goodbye my friend, you will certainly be missed
