“ I'll always remember extended family camping trips where Uncle Mike would usually find a slimy toad to bring back to the campsites to make the girls say ew, and the coolers of jungle juice! I'll also always remember Thanksgivings, Christmas' and Easter's at the new house and how proud he was of that house they he and the boys built. May he rest in peace, I know Grandma and Grandpa were waiting with open arms to greet him.

“ I will never forget everything you taught me about cars. Also all the amazing places you had us travel to and all the amazing nature sights to see 😊. One of my all time favorites we got to take part in was to hike the “narrows”! We woke very early at 6am to begin our all day adventure. It was one of the longest (12 hour) and most beautiful nature hikes I could’ve ever imagined. We always talked for years after that we wanted to do it again but never got around to it. We will definitely do more nature hikes in the afterlife. Love you so much dad! And miss you

“ I remember papa always taking me to the water and showed me that lighthouses are not scary when you get to the top (even though they are). He taught me all about nature. Everyday was something new with him. I remember always being by the pond with him. Even in the winter.

“ Trips were the most obvious memories. Taking us to see every major sight in the US. You name it, chances are we've seen it.

As much as I don't like winter today, my dad made winter fun for us as kids. When we were young he would get us geared up for the cold temperatures, and spend hours with us in the snow. He built giant mounds of snow he shoveled off the driveway and push us (my siblings and I) down on sleds over and over, one after another. He never seemed to grow tired of it. Once we packed the snow down from sledding down so many times, he helped us carve a snow fort we could huddle in and play. That's one of thousands of great memories. Love you dad!! Thank you for making our childhood amazing!!
